A NEW POET LAUREATE. Thackeray's Magazine, in London, paid Tennyson, the Poet-Laureate of England, sixteen hundred dollars for a poem, and the following two stanzas are just one half of it, or eight hundred dollars' worth:

What does little birdle say, In her nest at peep of day?
Let me fly, says little birdie—
Mother, let me fly away. Birdie, rest a little longer, Till thy tiny wings are stronger; So she rests a little longer, Then she flies away.

What does little baby say In her bed at peep of day ? Baby says, like little birdie, Let me rise and haste away, Baby, sleep a little longer, Until her little legs are stronger And after waiting like the birdie, Baby, too, shall fly away.

Isn't that grand! Isn't it the quintessence of poetry! Here's sixteen lines of our own, says an exchange, same style, same measure, and embodying about as much sentiment, for which we will willingly take a quarter:

What does little trocke says
In his pond at peep of day?
Let me swim, says little froggie—Bullfrog, let me swim away. Froggie, wait a little longer, Till your little legs are stronger; So he mounts upon a chunk, And then into the pond ker-ch-u-n-k. What does little piggie say,

In his sty at peep of day? Piggie says, like little froggie, Let me go and root to-day. Piggie, wait a little longer. Till your snout grows hard and stronger; If you suck a little longer. Piggie then may root away.

A young New England Mamma, on the important occasion of making her little boy, his first pair of colored trowsers, conceived the idea that it would be more economical to make them of the same dimensions behind and before, so that they might be changed about and wear evenly; and she so fashioned them. Their effect, when donned by the little victim, was ludicrous in the extreme. Papa, at first sight of the baggy garments, so "fearfully and wonderfully made," burst into a roar of laughter, and exclaimed, "Oh my dear, how could you have the heart to do it? Why, the poor little fellow won't know whether he is going to school or coming home."-Little Pilgrim.

Mr. Gilson Cushman, of Rochester, in this State, disappeared in February, 1858, while temporarily deranged. Recently, while a boy was trout fishing in a brook in that town, he hooked up the bone of a man's arm. An examination was made, and nearly the whole of a skeleton, which is known by pieces of cloth-ing attached, to be that of Mr. Cushman, has been found. The remains have been buried with appropriate funeral services.

How JOHN BULL IS BITTEN .- We have it, on what we consider good authority, that Sir Harry Bald de Houghton, proprietor of the pro-rebel organ in Liverpool—the Standard had $1,750,000 invested in the Confederate Cotton Loan. He took one tenth of the entire loan at par,—and his punishment by this time, we fancy, must be something more than he can bear. - N. Y. Express.

A German in Dubuque, Iowa, went to the war hirty months ago, leaving behind a good-looking wife. At Vicksburg he was shot and supposed killed, and his wife married a Dubuque miller a few months after. Last Saturday morning the supposed dead man came home again, told his story, and after a long discussion, got his wife back by paying $25 to the second husband.

The father of J. Wilkes Booth had a voracious appetite for liquor. Being without money one time when in New York, he went to a pawnbroker's shop, literally pawned himself for liquor, was regularly ticketed and was exhibited in a window, where he staid until "redeemed" by a friend.

An arrangement has been invented in Philadelphia to prevent horse cars running over anybody. The inventor attached it to a car, and then laid down on the track, and was thrust aside without injury. The bodies of the "first martyrs of the rebellion"-Ladd and Whitney-who were killed in Baltimore, April, 1861, were deposited under the monument at Lowell on Friday evening last.

Cheap Parlers. The other day I had a glimpse of one of the cosiest little parlors imaginable. It seemed the very centralization of genius and taste, coupled with the most surprising economy. It was the arrangement, the combination, the tout ensemble, that made the impression.

The room was small, papered with light paper of a small figure, and with a delicate sprinkling of gold. The bordering was narnow, blushing with roses of scarlet and crimson, and so natural that you thought you smelt their perfume in the air or saw their leaves tremble. Here and there were little cornices of varnished leather-work, with an owl's head or something of the kind peering from brackets below, and surmounted by tiny but faultless statues of plaster paris. Several exquisite engravings, received in connection with magazine subscriptions, adorned the walls. The frames were of common pine, but cunningly hid from view by wrappings of pink tissue paper.

The what-not, upon which innumerable diltile-or-nothings" were tastefully arranged, was of home manufacture; gnarled-roots varnished and ornamented with burr-work, and the shelves uniquely supported. The lounge was also home-made, well stuffed and covered with chintz. The carpet was low-priced, but beautiful in colors and design, and corresponding with the general arrangement of the room. The chairs were unpretentious;

but instead of being pushed against the wall square and prim, stood free, and faced out obliquely. The centre-table was of white pine covered with pictures grave and gay, artistically transferred upon varnished enamel-also the work of the good lady of the house. The

This property is well shaded by large trees on the east and from its location is a desirable summer residence. I have visited parlors lavish in wealth, in display, in magnificence. Carpeting from Turkey, statuary from Florence, tapestries from Persia, chandeliers of over-wrought massive-ness, ottomans of silk-all the et ceteras of oriental indolence and deliciousness. Yet to me they were far less attractive than the little parlor in question. They were oppressively grand, inharmoniously blended, stifling in their atmosphere. They were less home-like,
